

5 signs you're ready for the workspace revolution

How a modern approach can increase productivity and improve employee engagement.

1 You're lacking secure delivery of apps and data

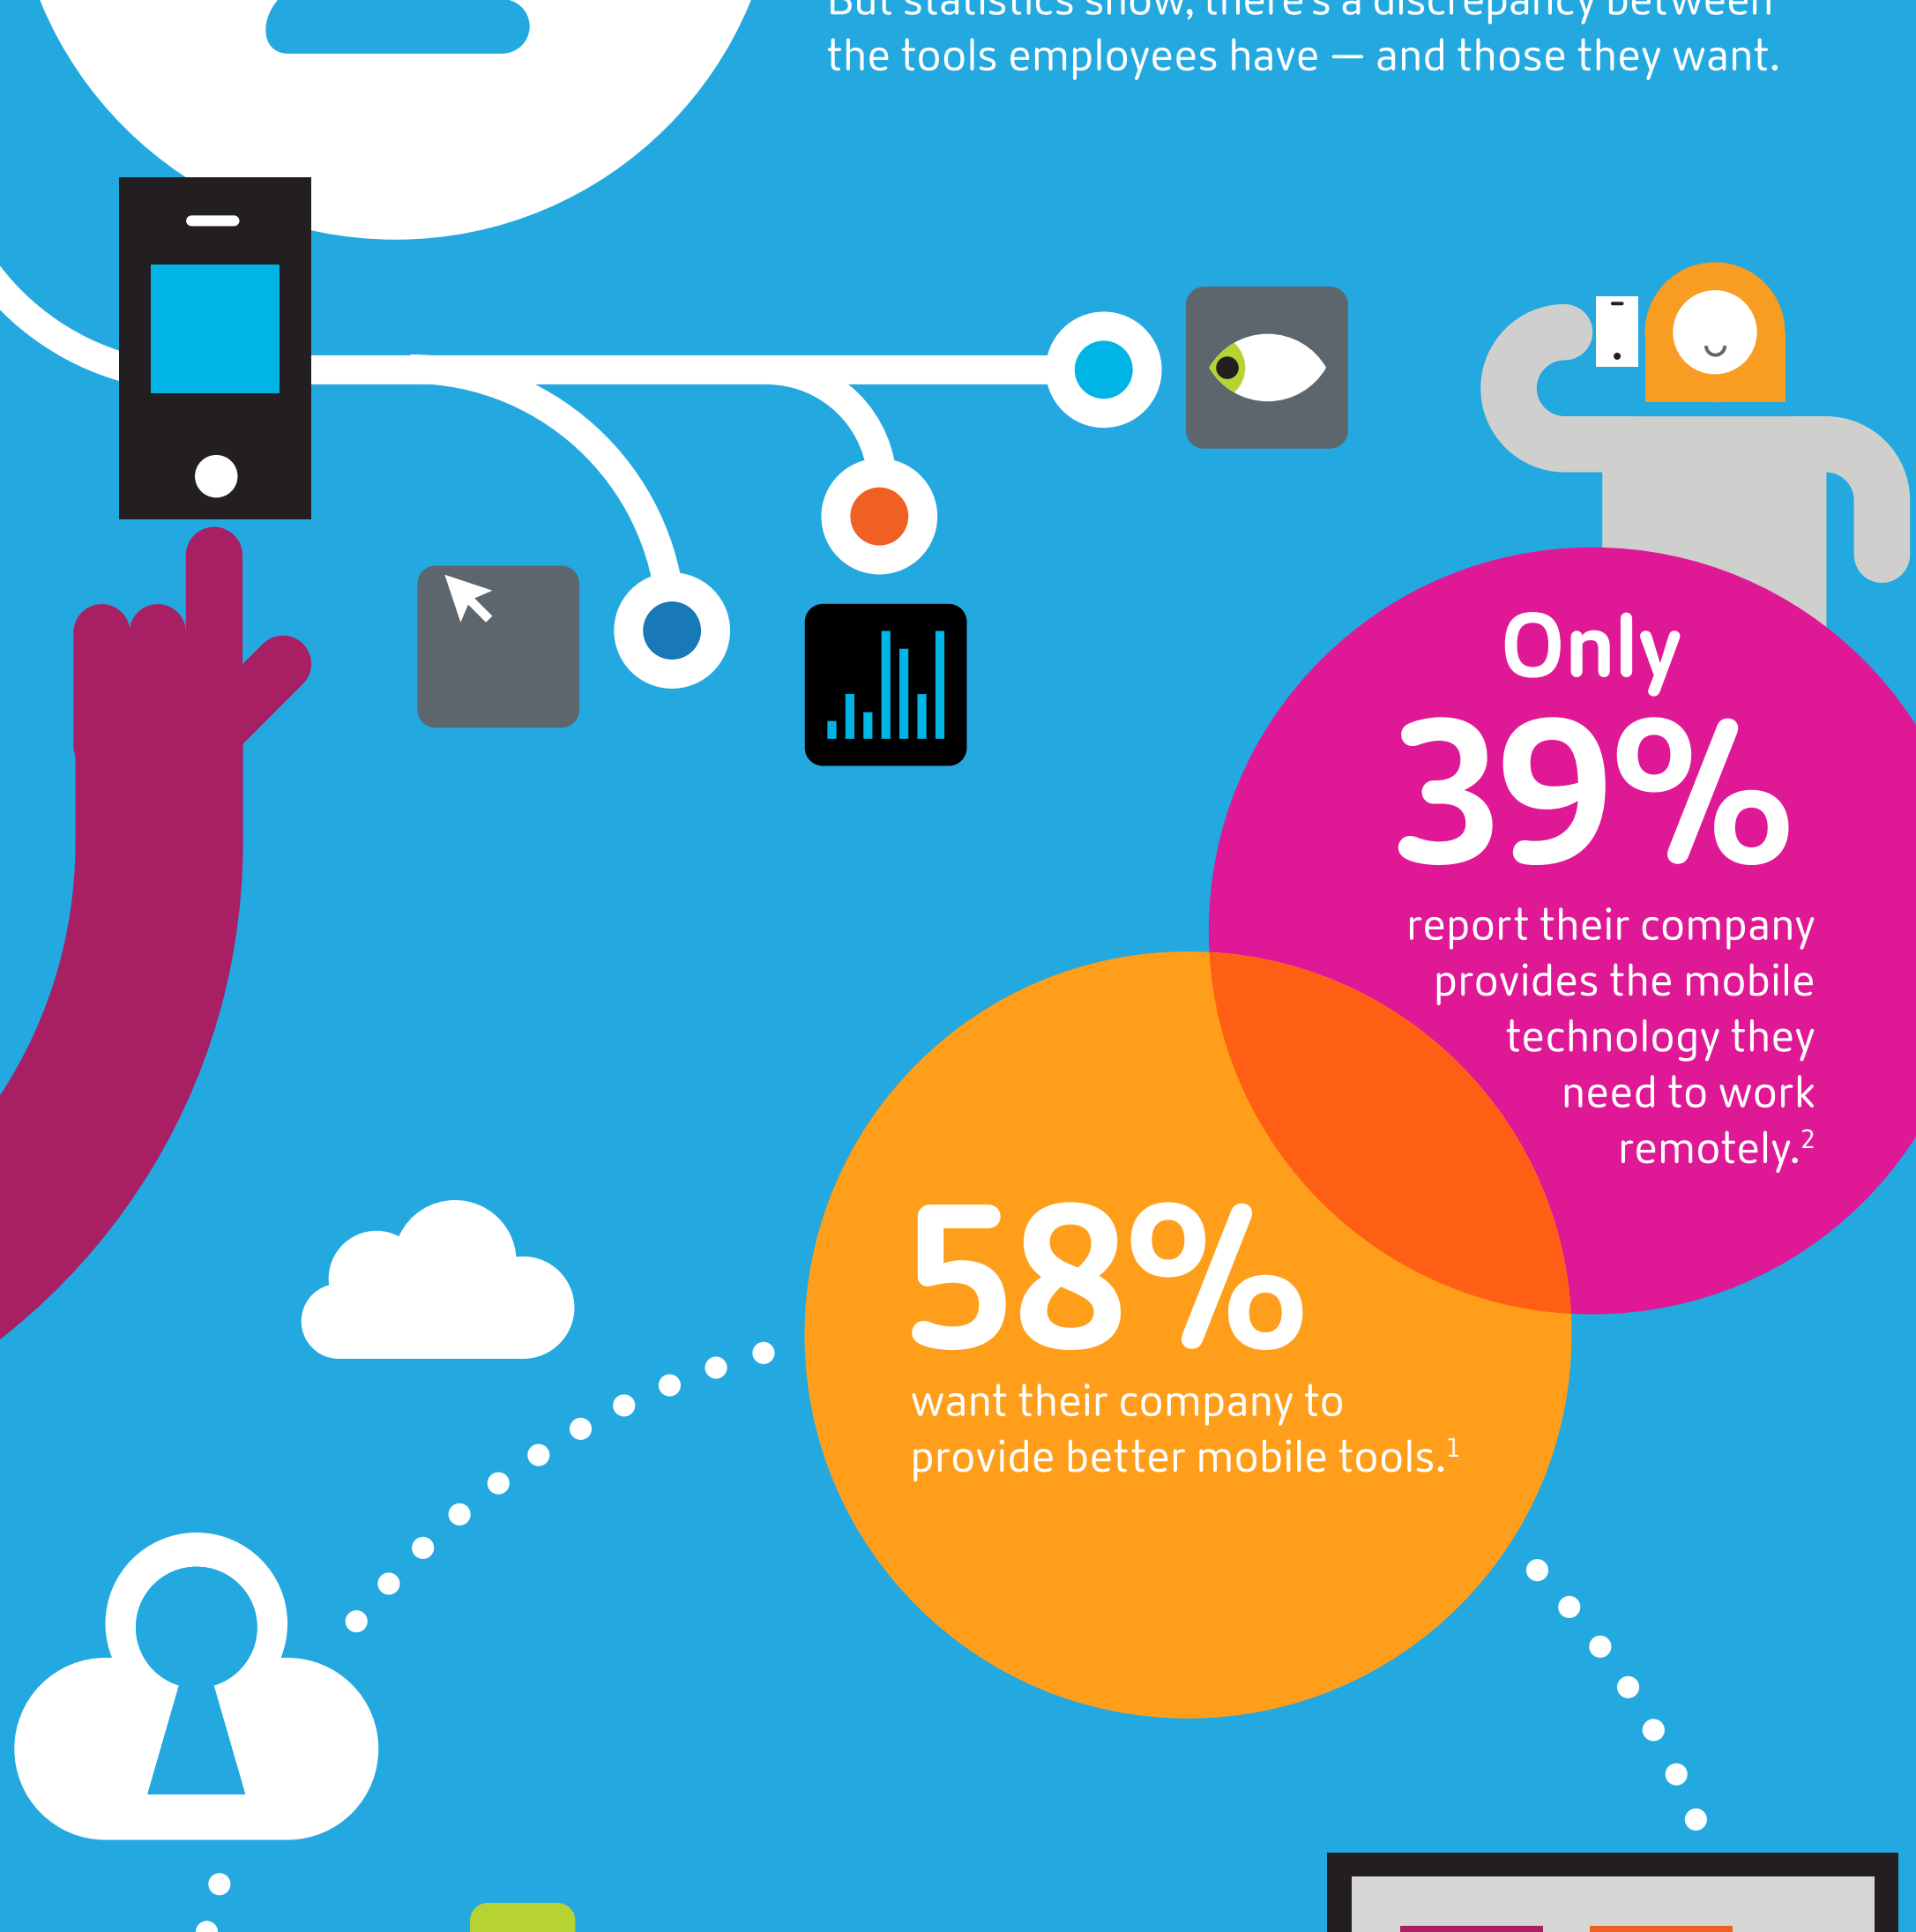

Managing multiple IT solutions is time-consuming, adds complexity, and creates gaps in security. With an integrated approach, you'll be able to deliver the apps and data your teams need to work efficiently and effectively — with security built in.

Employees crave a better user experience

Productivity hinges on employees getting the technology, access, and experience they need. But statistics show, there's a discrepancy between the tools employees have — and those they want.

Only 39%

report their company provides the mobile technology they need to work remotely.²

58%

want their company to provide better mobile tools.¹

Your employees use file-sharing apps outside of IT's view

Employees use unsanctioned apps to get work done because they feel too restricted by IT. Organizations that are future-focused need to have a solution that makes file sharing easy, while ensuring IT can maintain security and control.

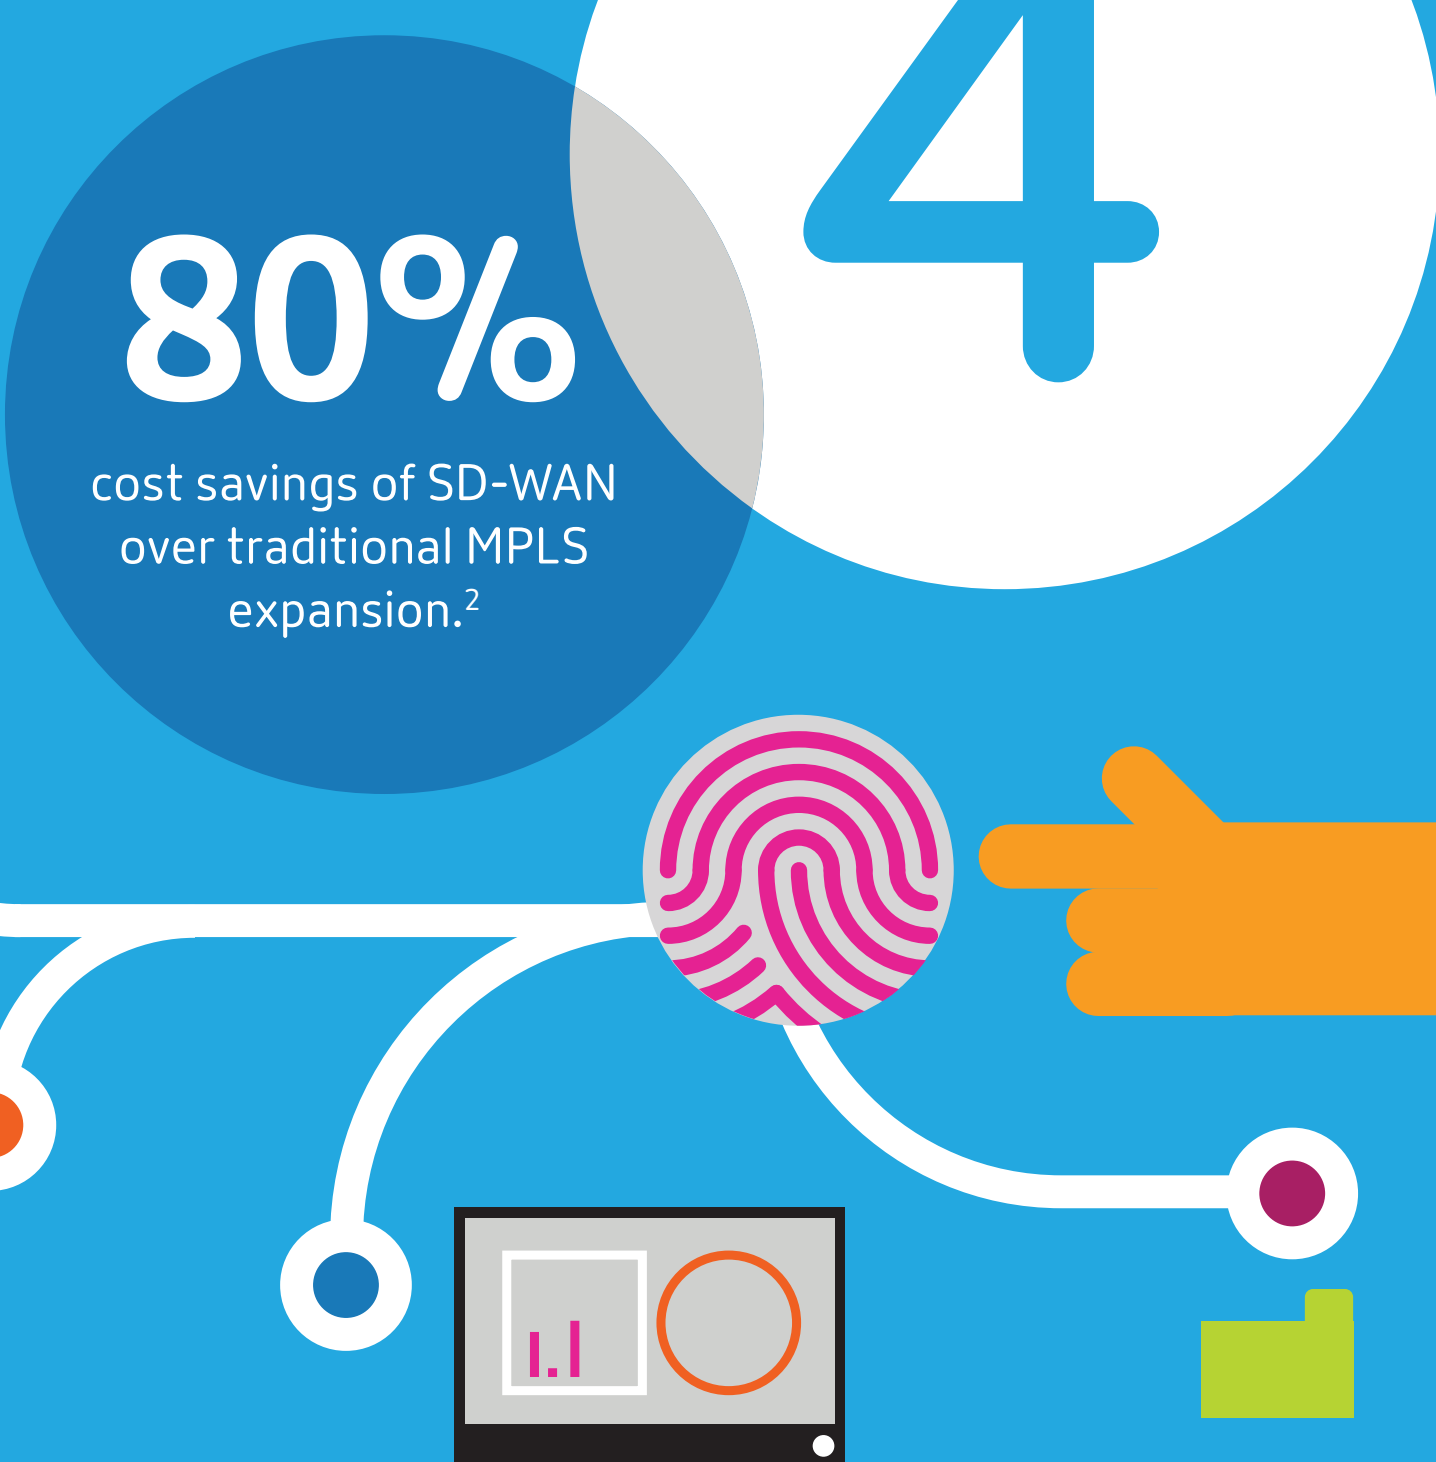

62% agree employees and third parties bypass security policies and technologies because they are too complex.³

Yet

84% agree too much complexity is making their organization more vulnerable to security threats.³

4 Multiple vendors are making systems hard to manage

The need to control business functions across locations and geographies is on the rise. Branch networking and SD-WAN (software-defined, wide area network) solutions are cost-effective approaches to uniting disparate vendors and networks.

80%

cost savings of SD-WAN over traditional MPLS expansion.²

5

You want to boost employee engagement and unleash productivity

Sometimes employees need the flexibility of working remotely. Having a solution to accommodate that leads to higher employee engagement.

Over 56% of people are more productive when working from home.¹
